Faith for Today Offering
Four hundred thousand dollars was the goal set for the "Faith for Today" telecast offering for last Sabbath, Feb. 13; which was taken up in all our churches.
Pastor William A. Fagal says: "As Christians we all look forward to great tomorrows. God has blessed in the past and my heart rejoices as I think of the 10,000 who have been baptized from the Faith for Today ministry since the first telecast was presented in 1950."
The first "Faith for Today" program was carried by one station in New York, mail response to it was 66 letters, most of them expressing appreciation for a telecast. Now I think of the Bible - centered solution to every problem. Faith for Today" is now carried by 225 stations. Most of these feature the program in a public service time. During 1965 we hope to add at least 56 stations to those featuring the telecast, and the objective is that at least 10 of these be in large metropolitan areas where millions of potential viewers are reached.
Sabbath, Feb. 13, was set aside by the Adventist Council as a day of special prayer for 'Faith for Today'. Recognizing the crisis that religious television faces today and the urgent need to add station coverage and the urgent need to increase "Faith for Today" ministry throughout the world, the Adventist Conference called on members every where to seek God's blessing on this day.
The offering goal set by the General Conference of 400,000 is twice the amount ever given to "Faith for Today" in an annual offering. The text of hearing the words of God is greater today than ever before. Give the word and we know it will never return unto him void. Isaih 55:11

Attends Institute

The Pastors' Institute, sponsored by the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, the Methodist Church and the Presbyterian Church, U.S., will be held, through Thursday, today, on the campus of Union Theological Seminary and at Ginter Park Presbyterian Church. Among those attending is Rev. M. G. Stimpson of Appomattox.

The Pastor Speaks

Rev. Thomas Waddill

(Last year Lynchburg General Hospital added a full - time chaplain to its staff. This means that chaplain service is available to the vast majority of us when we are in the hospital. (VBH has long had a chaplain) In order that we may make more meaningful use of this service I have asked Chaplain Edward O. Temple, Jr., of Lynchburg General Hospital, to write a series of articles describing the work of a hospital chaplain.)

The Work of a Chaplain

A chaplain is an ordained minister of the gospel who serves largely within the confines of an institution. In a hospital his basic ministry is to the religious needs of patients; but because the climate of healing is of great importance in total patient care, he also frequently ministers to the families of patients, to staff and personnel of the hospital, and to the surrounding community.

While in some hospitals it is possible for a chaplain to meet with patients in groups, and in nearly all hospitals he has numbers of patients attending services of worship together, yet in the main he ministers to patients individually, and usually at bedside.

This individual ministry according to each patient's need may involve friendly visitation, ritual and sacramental performance, or pastoral counseling; and it may be carried on either in the course of regular rounds or on the basis of request and referral. The times when pastoral care is likely to be most appropriate are when a patient is:(1) Newly admitted (2) Critically ill. (3) Scheduled for surgery (4) Waiting for diagnosis (5) Adjusting to "bad news" (6) Undergoing protracted treatment.

Polley on the chaplain's visitatics needs to be clearly understood by all concerned. The following types of policy are found in hospitals today:

1. Complete routine coverage. The Chaplain sees every new patient within a short time after admission, and at intervals there after depending on the patient's need and desire.

2. Selective routine coverage. The chaplain routinely sees only patients in certain categories, such as the critically ill, those scheduled for surgery or certain kinds of surgery, those who have no local pastor.

3. Request and referral coverage. The chaplain sees only those patients who request his services, or who are referred to him by families, pasters, doctors, nurses, social workers, etc. This kind of visitation almost always involves counseling with the patient and conferral with staff or family, and therefore consumes a great deal of time per patient. An average of about 15 patients a day has been found to be all a chaplain can take care of on this basis.

In small hospitals complete routine coverage is usual. In large hospitals a combination of selective routine and request and referral coverage is the norm.

Any estimate of the time a chaplain is expected to spend in visitation must take into account the other demands upon him for service to the total religious environment of the patient. These other activities are to be understood as an extension of pastoral care, and may include the following:

1. Direction of religious activities in the hospital.
2. Conduct of worship services.
3. Counseling with families of patients.
4. Counseling with staff, personnel, and students.
5. Teaching medical and nursing students.
6. Participation in staff conferences.
7. Liaison with local pastors and churches.

Dear Sir:

Cir. H. P. Lair had bought me a year's subscription of the Times-Virginian the beginning of last year. I am not sure when it will expire, so I have decided to mail a check to renew the subscription.

Since I am going to make my home in Appomattox County after I retire from the Air Force I find the newspaper a big help in keeping up with the various activities in Appomattox and the surrounding villages in Appomattox County. I don't think there is a better means of knowing about a town or city than reading their newspaper. I am making sure Appomattox will not be a strange place to me when I am ready to settle here.

Sincerely Yours,
John Louter

What Christ Means

Lesson for February 21, 1965

Under the spreading shade trees of a little mountain resort called Caesarea Philippi, a conversation occurred which has had echoes and raised questions for a good nineteen centuries. The two men in the conversation were Jesus of Nazareth and his most friend, Simon Peter. Actually Peter was a nickname, and it was during this conversation that Jesus gave his friend the name Peter. He had been born Bar-Jonas, the same as our Johnson; Jesus gave him a name which like all nicknames gives an impression of the person, what he is like. What did Jesus say to Peter? And what did Peter say to Jesus? And more important, what did Jesus and Peter mean by what they said to each other?

Protestants think one way to ask about these questions, Roman Catholics another. Still, we are agreed on one point. We see eye to eye about what Peter said and meant.

The Question

So let us stick to Simon Peter's answer to the question which Jesus asked. Jesus approved Peter's answer, indeed assured the probably astonished man that his answer was the right one. Peter, who talked so often without thinking, must have been as surprised as he was pleased to think that for once he was right the first time. Jesus started by asking who people thought he was. Jesus knew he would strike people, thoughtful people, as having more depths in his nature than could be seen with the naked eye. The simple answer: "People know your name is Jesus and that you came from Nazareth; why should you ask?" Jesus didn't mean that. He meant; Whom do I remind people of? Who is, so to speak, my spiritual twin brother?

Jesus was not content with asking what "men"—"people"—thought of him. He already knew, perhaps, what Peter told him; that the people thought of him as a kind of second Elijah or Jeremiah or even John the Baptizer (who also was dead). Jesus made no remark about the people's opinions. He brought the question down to ground level: Who do YOU say I am? That's what counts. Jesus did not want to be a question mark only.

Can Jesus Be Classified?

Peter's answer said more than meets the modern eye. Messiah is a word without meaning to most men on the street. Christ has come to be a proper name. Most persons do not realize that when Peter said, You are the Christ (or You are the Messiah —they mean the same) he was as good as saying: You are not in any class of mankind. There is no one, absolutely no one, in the same class as yourself. There have been other healers, other teachers, other preachers; but no other Messiah. Once in history, once and never again, once and never before; once the Messiah comes, there will be no others. This is the center of human history. So the Christian church ever since has resisted all efforts to label, classify or pigeon hole Jesus. He is a prophet, yet (as he said) more than a prophet. He was and is always more-than anything that we can say about him.

At Least This!

But can't we say more than this? Must we call Jesus only a plus-X, a mysterious additive to ordinary humanity? Mystery he may be; but there are some things we can say "Messiah" means even though its full meaning eludes us. At least this: He speaks with the authority of God; he is the representative Man and also the Representative of God. He is God as man, God in man, he is what God wants us to know of himself. Alongside this, there shines another meaning in the simple title "Christ." The name in the Old Testament always had the sound of Victory; God's victory would at last be won by the Messiah. Christians to this day believe that the great war between God and evil will not be a draw; Christ will win the last struggle. He is the Voice and the Victory of God.

By: Paul Thompson

As a small measure of comfort to those who look at the future with fear and misgivings, a poem has been credited to Bernard Baruch: A man sintenced to death by an anarchist court asked for his life on the condition that he teach the ruler's horse to fly within a year. The offer was accepted.

A friend of the man pointed out that he had merely postponed the inevitable. In answer, the man pointed out that the odds were four-to-one in his behalf; Within the king might die. The man might die. The horse might die. And there always remained the possibility he might teach the horse to fly.

We can't teach horses to fly either. But we might be trained our chefs and waitresses to fly with your order . . . and you'll see flying dishes, meals, service and customers who are impatient to get their regular delightful dinner. Come to Parkway Restaurant, Route 24, Appomattox, and see for yourself. Call 352-7443.
